

Re: Terrorism: What comes next?

By Yahya Fadlalla

THE HAMILTON SPECTATOR

Feb 4, 2010

Referring to the “Christmas Day Bomber” and terrorist threats in general, Fadlalla asserts that terrorism is a consequence of Canadian and American “foreign policy” in reaction to “occupying Muslim lands”. This assertion is shockingly naïve from someone professing to be a “counterterrorism expert”. Muslim on Muslim terrorism is more prevalent in Muslim countries than anywhere on earth. Consider that in the very same week Fadlalla’s article appeared, 54 people were killed in Iraq by a female suicide bomber who targeted Shiite pilgrims. Additionally, 25 innocent people were murdered in Karachi by a suicide bomber. The list of Muslim terrorism casualties is endless and amount to thousands of people every single year. Yet, Fadlalla and others continue to mislead the west and deflect responsibility by claiming that terrorism is a product of the west. Terrorists will make every excuse to murder innocent civilians (Muslim and Infidel alike) no matter culture, religion, politics or geography. The foreign policy excuse is just that – an excuse for murder.

Avi Benlolo

President & CEO

Friends of Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies